Each year, IFCO saves over 4 million trees

Pallet Repair, Recycling, and Reuse

Pallet repair and recycling are examples of reuse - the Environmental Protection Agency's most preferred method of waste reduction. In fact, less than 3% of the nearly 700 million pallets manufactured and repaired each year ever end up in landfills.

Wood pallets are reusable, repairable, recyclable, and made from a renewable resource. By repairing your used wooden pallets, you are extending their useful lives, enabling them to be reused and repaired again and again. Pooled pallets (either wooden or plastic) can offer some of the same environmental benefits but at a higher average cost and with the added headache of pallet tracking and accounting.

Sustainable Solutions Save Time and Money

Every year, 1.9 billion wooden pallets are in circulation in the United States, transporting a variety of goods. IFCO recycled over 73 million pallets last year, resulting in a landfill diversion of over 1.8 million tons.

IFCO pallets are 100% reusable, recyclable, and come from a renewable resource, and our recycled pallets meet or exceed the capability of new pallets at a fraction of the cost. Our flexible pallet management services business model enables us to offer custom services to companies in a wide range of industries.

With our unique needs assessment process, we will help you determine the best pallet program and most ideal pallet for your needs. Pallet Management is what we do best. Outsource your pallet management to us, and we will handle all the details - from pallet supply to pallet disposal to inventory management and comprehensive tracking and reporting.
